The Yamhill County Correctional Facility is a small community within the community. It provides many of the same services that you have in your community. Doctor and dentist care, a commissary, social and educational programs as well as drug and alcohol and psychological counseling. Some of these services, like ordering from the commissary and visits are considered privileges. These privileges can be lost for poor behavior.

The Work Release Center provides dormitory style housing for up to 26 inmates. Sentenced inmates enrolled in the work release program live in the work release center but are released each day to go to regular jobs. By keeping their jobs while serving their sentence, these inmates can support their families and pay court-ordered restitution to the victims of their crime.

Sentenced inmates who meet the requirements are assigned to the sheriff's work crew. These inmates perform community service projects throughout the county. In exchange for their labor, the inmates can be credited with reduction of their sentence based on work performed.
